

EΒ

日日

The bill goes through a similar process. Both chambers must pass the same final version of the bill for it to be enacted.

Governor

The bill is debated in the chamber where it originated. If it is passed to be engrossed (i.e. printed with all passed amendments), it is sent to the other chamber.

Law

The bill goes to the Governor who can sign it or veto it. If signed, it becomes law. If vetoed, it goes back to the House and Senate (the veto can be overridden by a 2/3 vote in both chambers).

A bill becomes law 90 days after the end of the legislative session in which it was passed unless it is passed as an emergency law or it stipulates an effective date.

For a detailed version of the legislative process, see Path of Legislation in Maine.